what non-partisanism had done for Glasgow, and how it was secured, but it has made no reply. The fact is that non-partisanism hasn't done a single thing for that city. The News has sought to convey the idea to the people of Sait Lake City and Utah that Glasgow had had partisan government such as we know it in the United States, and that it had become a great modern city and had achieved signal success in solving municipal problems by abandoning partisan gov erament. Nothing could be falser. That from which the people of Ginsgow sought to free thomselves, and from which they finally have to a very great degree, was not partiesn government the very kind of government that the non-partisan committee is endeavoring to fasten upon Salt Lake City. One who The dollar wheat seems to have been special purpose of studying its municipul administration, tells how Glasgow on governed. He says:

All that has been changed. Now only which is dead set the dean of the Merchants' House and the dracen convener of the Trades' Guild sit as members of the common council of Clasgow.

And what were these old town councils from which the people of Glasgow have been tonging to be free for hundreds of years? Sir James Bell, the lord provest of Glasgow, says that 'the town councils were close corporations, sitting in secret conclave, and were out of sympathy with the desires and wants of the mass of the population. They were looked on with suspicion and dislike, an unwilling obedience was ren-dered to their rule, and the taxes they imposed, unequal in their incidence were gradgingly paid, under the fear that they might not be applied to their
